Bay to become casino center?

BY MARY G. SEILEY
With some casinos faltering—or closing—in Mississippi and Louisiana, why have plans for two new ones on the drawing boards in Diamondhead?

Ask the saturation question to Charles "Kip" Reddien and he's got the answer: the Mississippi market as such did saturate initially because the infrastructure to support it wasn't there. Soon it will be, he said in a Wednesday interview, with hotels and public facilities to accommodate a new industry that will then expand even more.

As the hotels and infrastructure upgrades continue to appear, he said, so will additional casinos and the patrons to fill them.

"This is a growing market, not a saturated market. If that were the thought process, Las Vegas would be shrinking," he said.

Last week, Reddien's proposed Casino World site at Diamondhead won the state Gaming Commission's blessing—a first, key step in the development process.

If it all falls together, some $130 million to $150 million worth of facilities would be put into place.

Two, 60,000 square foot floating casinos in the Bay of St. Louis, bumping up against the Harrison County line.

Reddien said one of those will be developed, hopefully, by a joint venture concern. Lights from both will be blacked out on the Bay side to keep from annoying Bay area residents, he said.

A 450-room luxury hotel, some eight to 12 stories tall. The building will be expandable for later growth.

A 800-foot to 1,200-foot passageway between the hotel and the casinos. While designers haven't finalized plans for that link, Reddien said it will amount to a "creative experience" for visitors...a fun part of the visit. It will be, of course, elevated over the marshes.

A 50-space recreational vehicle park.

An entertainment center, parking garage and golf course.

Some 150 to 200 acres left in its natural state, serving as a

Hancock board approves vo-tech

BY TRACI BONNEY
The Hancock County School Board meeting Monday addressed several matters, including approval of a bid for additions and renovations at the Hancock County Vocational Complex.

Samuel B. Day Construction of Gulfport, the lowest bidder, offered a base bid of $549,600. The base bid project includes some needed painting and interior cosmetic work on the existing building, as well as construction of several classrooms which will house drafting and other classes.

Samuel B. Day also had the lowest bid on an alternate project that involves work on the exterior of the vo-tech building so that it will harmonize better with the overall appearance of the high school complex.

However, the board voted to approve Day's bid only on the base bid project, because the board members felt the building didn't look so bad if improving its appearance meant the district would have to spend $31,100.

"Every time I think about that $31,100, that building looks better and better," commented board trustee Larry Peterson.

The rest of the board ap-

Ranking dispute settled at Bay High

BY RICHARD MEEK
Correspondence courses turned out to be the panacea in a dispute over class rankings at Bay High School.

The Bay St. Louis-Waveland School Board voted to allow students to take advanced correspondence courses through the University of Southern Mississippi or Mississippi State University that will be on a par with Level I classes at Bay High. Level I classes are the highest weighted classes in the school's ranking system.

And in a surprising move, the board followed the lead of Board President Linda Penrose and voted to undo a previous decision regarding ranking guidelines for the incoming freshman. Previously, the board had informally agreed to use the quality point system for the incoming freshman.

But when the final vote was taken, the board disregarded its earlier agreement and elected to keep the status quo, which is a combination of the quality point and numeric value systems.

It was that combination of systems that has been at the core of a heated controversy. The dispute resolved around

Gulfside Assembly vandalism

The "Jones house" at Gulfside United Methodist Assembly in Waveland, which is under renovation, was the victim of vandals with spray paint. Satanic and other symbols were painted on doors, walls and floors of the building. Sunday night Waveland Police was summoned and four persons were arrested outside the building for possession of alcohol. Police Chief Jimmy Varnell said this was the first call he had received from Gulfside in reference to the building. Chief Varnell said the four were seeking to visit the "haunted house," as it was being watched for intruders, Mrs. Marian Martin, center director, said. Gulfside was founded by Robert E. Jones in 1923 as a religious, educational, recreational and cultural center for blacks. (Echo staff photos by Ellis C. Cuevas)

Bay City Council approves Athletic Drive complex upgrade

BY MARY G. SEILEY
Bay St. Louis City Council agreed Tuesday to assume a major upgrade project for the ballfield complex on Athletic Drive.

The action, at the request of Mayor Eddie Favre, takes responsibility for the project from the city's Parks and Playgrounds Commission.

Favre said the city's Public Works staff is "in a little better position" to complete the project than Parks and Playgrounds officials who have been working on it for several years.

The Parks and Playgrounds Commission is appointed by City Council and receives its budget through a separate tax levy. City Council has, however, supplemented that with extra money to keep the recreation project moving.

Favre said in assuming the responsibility for the project, the city would retain what's left of the city's allocation to the commission.

He also said while city staffers will work directly on the upgrade project, some of the work may be put out for bids. The city may also want to seek some grant funds to help finance some of the project, the mayor said.

Public Works Director Ron Vanney said Wednesday officials want to create up to six ball fields at the 20-acre facility the city leases from the school system.

But first, he said, study needs to be done of exactly what's needed and how best to build it. He said city officials will explore those questions before proceeding.

ing -- including talking with recreation officials in Slidell,

La., which features a high quality ball complex.

In other matters Tuesday, council agreed to share the services of its animal control officer with the City of Waveland. Favre said Waveland is willing to pay half the officer's salary, and pick up the maintenance tab for his vehicle.

Waveland is without an animal control officer at this time, said Favre.

"What's happened is, we're in much better shape than before," with animal control in Bay St. Louis, said Favre. The officer, Curtis Quate, has been so successful that the job currently doesn't require as much time as it did when he first went on duty, the mayor added.

In another matter, council agreed to hire a consultant to continue to work on lowering flood insurance rates in the city.

Favre said as a result of the consultant's first contract, federal officials have agreed to a five percent reduction for all flood insurance policies in the city, as of Oct. 1. By compiling more information to submit for federal study, said Favre, another five percent rate reduction is possible.

Council set special workshop sessions on two matters that require detailed discussion: the pending comprehensive plan and a proposed new version of the municipal code.

Council agreed to meet on the comprehensive plan at the request of council member James Thriffley -- he criticized the city's consultant in charge of the project for delaying the process.

"This dragging of feet is unbelievable," said Thriffley, noting that the study was launched more than a year ago. Thriffley said Corrine Fox of Continental Consultants of Jackson should be required to attend a workshop at 6:30 p.m. June 5, and bring documentation showing council's opinions on details of the proposed plan.

The study is to go from council's hands to the Planning and Zoning Commission for review and public hearings, and back to council for final action.

Council set a special workshop for July 11 at 7 p.m. to review the proposed municipal code re-write.

The suggested code revisions were made by a consulting firm that specializes in city ordinances. Officials say many of the changes eliminate redundant provisions, and bring the code into compliance with relevant state laws.

Lack of space limits leash law

BY MARY G. SEILEY
A shortage of space at the Waveland animal shelter is impacting how the county plans to enforce its new leash law.

Sheriff Ronnie Peterson said Tuesday shelter officials he's spoken with say their facility is "completely full" and incapable of handling a major influx of additional strays.

Peterson said rather than launch a massive roundup of loose dogs immediately, his department will enforce the law by responding to complaints from individual citizens.

The county's new leash law went into effect earlier this month in the unincorporated area south of Interstate 10. It requires that dogs and cats be confined within yards or on leashes.

Peterson said his department's animal warden and deputies always have responded to calls from citizens concerned about vicious animals at large in the county.

With the new leash law in effect, they now can respond to calls from those upset over pets left to roam freely.

Those pets at times are a nuisance in populated areas, as they topple trash cans and pose a potential threat to children's safety, he said.

Peterson urged that pet owners in the area at issue familiarize themselves with the new law and abide by its provisions voluntarily.

Full enforcement of the leash law would require hiring additional personnel, said Peterson, and may well require building a new animal shelter to accommodate the additional animals.

The sheriff said aside from a new animal shelter, area officials should consider consolidating their animal control programs -- the cities of Bay St. Louis and Waveland have separate enforcement programs, but all animals are captured pets to the Waveland facility.

"CUEVAS QUOTES"

By Ellis C. Cuevas

The extra long Fourth of July weekend is fast approaching, and many preparations are underway for many special events.

Local events, which will be happening that long weekend include:

—The Annual Garden Island Community Association's Boat parade is set for noon.

—The Annual Jourdan River Association's parade is set for 1 p.m.

—The Clermont Harbor July Fourth Community parade is also set for 1 p.m.

—Then there is the Mississippi Deep Sea Fishing Rodeo which begins on June 30 and runs through July 4th.

—The big Our Lady of the Gulf Crab Festival runs July 1 through July 4 in Bay St. Louis.

—St. Rose de Lima Catholic Church's 69th Annual Family Fair is set for June 30 through July 2.

These are just a few of the many happenings going on for the long weekend.

So it sounds like it will not be hard for someone to find something to do over the July 4th weekend.

We will be telling you more about the events as they approach.

I received word this week from a travel trailer owner of Bay St. Louis, who said he feels discriminated against because his license tag's price did not take a drop like those on cars and trucks.

He said he found this out when he recently renewed his tag for the travel trailer.

I never once heard talk about travel trailers being considered in the car and truck tag reduction bill when it was being discussed at the Legislative Session in Jackson.

I guess the travel trailer owners need to pull together and talk to their Legislators, as I think they are the ones who set the vehicular tax structures.

This morning at 8 a.m., the Diamondhead Business and Professional Association will meet at the Days Inn.

Jim Van Norman, president of the Diamondhead Property Owners Association is the scheduled speaker.

Van Norman is to talk about current events around Diamondhead.

All members and guests are urged to attend.

Hope Haven help

Dorothy Rickson Hopkins, left, presents a check to Peggy Clemons, president of the Diamondhead Women's Club, for Hope Haven and Alzheimers for over $1,000 from a Father's Day weekend fun drive. Hopkins for the past 15 years has organized Diamondhead Ladies (golfers, tennis players, garden clubbers, bridge players, swimmers, new comers and dancers) to help raise money for various charities. Mrs. Hopkins reports her glad supply will come to an end because her supplier "Mr. Glad" plans to retire this year. "We all appreciate and thank the ladies and gentlemen of Diamondhead who gave their time and energy to a great cause, (children)," Mrs. Dorothy Rickson Hopkins said. (Echo staff photo by Ellis C. Flag Day remembered

It is unfortunate that for many people caught up in the daily grind of life, June 14 is often overlooked as just another day. But in a little town called Waubesa, Wis., population 500, Flag Day has special meaning. Each year, on the second Sunday in June, the population swells to over 10,000 to honor the Stars and Stripes and the father of Flag Day.

It all started 110 years ago when a 19-year-old school teacher named Bernard J. Cigrand and his pupils circled around a 10-inch, 39 star flag standing in a bottle on the teacher's desk. However, it wasn't until 31 years later, when President Woodrow Wilson proclaimed the national observance of Flag Day, that Cigrand and his students' crusade was rewarded. But today their crusade has all but been forgotten.

To think that after so much hard work and sacrifice to honor our country and its greatest symbol, there are people today who adamantly think it is their right to show flagrant disrespect to the flag. If he were still alive, Cigrand would certainly be disappointed.

"If he were here today, I think he would be hurt by those who show disregard for the flag," says Cigrand's great-grandniece, Charlotte M. Ayers of Beaufort, S.C. "I think he would be working hard with state legislatures to put laws protecting the flag on their books. And I expect he would be lecturing in towns throughout the country and visiting classrooms as he did in 1885 to instill pride and patriotism in young and old."

As an original cosponsor of a resolution aimed at protecting the flag, I am pleased the measure is now moving through the House with the backing of nearly 300 members.

The resolution, sponsored by Mississippi's Sonny Montgomery and Gerald Solomon of New York calls for a constitutional amendment to allow Congress and the states to pass laws prohibiting flag burning or other physical desecration of the flag.

Ratification should come quickly. Polls show 80 percent of Americans back it, and 49 state legislatures have passed resolutions asking Congress to pass the amendment. Asked what sort of people burn the flag, Ayers says, "What sort of people are they? Uncaring publicity seekers, or people how take everything for granted living in this beautiful country." I agree.

WASHINGTON REPORT

By Senator Thad Cochran

Cochran urges support for farm programs

Senator Thad Cochran urged Senate support for farm programs to strengthen American agriculture.

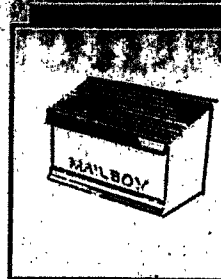

"Food and fiber production and related businesses constitute the largest sector of our economy," said Cochran, "and we must ensure it remains strong at home and competitive abroad."

Cochran chaired a Senate hearing of the Agriculture Subcommittee on Production and Price Competitiveness. Today's hearing was the final one before the Committee begins drafting the 1995 Farm Bill.

"The great challenge is to move toward a balanced budget and at the same time preserve those programs that are really important. Our commodity support programs work well for America and need to be continued," added Cochran. Representatives of cotton, rice, soybean, peanut, corn, wheat, sugar, dairy producers and other agricultural interests testified before the Subcommittee.

At the hearing, Cochran also discussed past declines in farm program spending and projected spending levels. "For farm programs from 1986 to 1995, the cost of the Commodity Credit Corporation has declined from $26 billion in 1986 to less than $9 billion this year. That represents a reduction of over 65 percent. According to the Congressional Budget Office, under current law farm program spending is projected to remain at or below this present level through the year 2000," said Cochran.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dismay expressed over full-page ad

Dear Editor:
I would like to express the dismay I felt upon reading the full-page ad placed in the June 18 issue by employees of the Jubilee Casino.

At the heart of this dispute, as everyone should know by now, is the discrepancy between the casino's estimated tax bill for 1995 (a small number) and the actual tax bill as calculated by the office of Hancock County Tax Assessor Edward Murtagh (a much larger number).

The casino's reaction was to pay the amount of the estimated tax bill and flatly refuse to pay any more. The tax assessor's reaction was to threaten to seize the property — as authorized by law — and auction it off to the highest bidder.

Unfortunately, the employees of the casino are caught in the middle. If the casino closes, they will lose their jobs. I empathize with their anger, because I would feel exactly the same way were I in that situation: furious and scared.

However, I feel that their anger is misdirected, for it seems (to me) that the present situation has been brought on by the recalcitrance of their employers, who are not inclined to discuss this matter in a civilized way — i.e., in the courts — rather than a tax assessor run amuck.

Mr. Murtagh, as an agent of Hancock County, is required by law to uphold the duties of his office. His legal course of action in this matter is largely predetermined, based in part on the actions of the other party.

Am I to understand that the Jubilee employees wish to turn Mr. Murtagh out of office because he is performing his job to the best of his ability?

It seems that the public would be well served by a tax assessor who can operate independent of casino industry influence. Certainly, Mr. Murtagh has not been well served by those who placed this ad.

I do not know Mr. Murtagh personally, nor have I ever met him. I do write several large checks to his office during the course of the year (in keeping with my fiscal responsibilities) and I have no complaint with the performance of his office.

This affair does not seem to be a personal vendetta or a political ploy, as the ad suggests. At the same time, I am also sympathetic to the casino employees because their economic security is at stake. Nobody wants to lose their job.

Is the initial tax estimate binding? Is the later official calculation correct? Only the courts can decide. If Mr. Murtagh is wrong, he should be held accountable as his office demands. If he is right, the casino should be held liable as justice demands.

The casino employees have every right to be very angry right now. But are they angry at the right person?

Sincerely,
David E. Sallis

Help beautify Waveland

We should plant petunias in the Tide Street and Pine Street two-month-old potholes.

Also, Confederate jasmine vines should be planted around the trash on Water Street. Both would beautify Waveland.

Reader says Echo should have been at reception

Dear Editor:
A rather significant event occurred on June 11, a 50th anniversary and retirement party with no coverage by the Echo — for shame!

Yes, one Sister Jane Bircher, OP, was honored with a Mass at St. Clare Church followed by a reception in the parish hall — her 50th anniversary as a nun.

To help celebrate this special occasion, dignitaries came from across the Coast and New Orleans, including Bishop Howze, Mayor Mason, and others. About 300 people attended the reception, sponsored by the St. Clare Altar Society with help from all parish organizations.

For the past 19 years, Sister Jane was both a teacher, then principal at St. Clare School.

Her methods prove that love and discipline are still the best way to teach children. She will be missed by all.

Right-of-way clearing could increase parking on beach

Dear Editor:
The cost of the new parking lot at the foot of Washington Avenue figures out at $928 per space.

Two of my neighbors, both non-residents, on South Beach near Bay Oaks Drive, have blocked the right-of-way with railroad cross-ties.

Removal of same would create at least six parking spaces at no cost. This bugs me, because it's a daily reminder of the failure of government, at all levels, to do what is right simply because it is right.

This is a reflection on our own sense of values. Our principle reasons for doing right are to stay out of jail and to get to Heaven.

Sincerely,

Environmental firm exploring uses of NASA-developed technology

An environmental engineering and consulting firm headquartered in Minnesota is working with NASA's John C. Stennis Space Center (SSC) in Hancock County to apply NASA-developed technology to its business. This technology can potentially be applied anywhere in the United States.

Summit Envirosolution Inc., from Minneapolis, is one of NASA's Earth Observation Commercial Applications Program (EOCAP) projects. The major goals of Summit's EOCAP project with NASA were to reduce their clients' costs for complying with environmental laws, to more accurately characterize the quality of ground water, to chart surface sources of water and to assess changes and potential stress impacts of any type of potential water contamination for the protection of the users.

Traditionally, Summit has placed people in the field to manually measure an area's water table depth, height and quality. However, this has proven to be costly due to the number of wells and the large distances between each one.

To save manhours and money, Summit would like to be able to use remote sensors to take water measurements and then send the information back to the home office via radio waves.

Through EOCAP, Stennis Space Center is helping Summit develop REALFLOW™, an integrated system for collecting and analyzing ground water elevation data. The data is transmitted to a processing center to be developed into a multi-dimensional model. The company is reviewing the benefits of commercially available, remotely sensed data to enhance their computer software analysis package.

"EOCAP seeks increased innovation in the commercial application of largely proven remote sensing technologies and supports the transition of such innovations to the commercial marketplace," said Mark Mick, NASA's EOCAP manager. "It is a NASA-managed effort to generate expanded spinoff benefits to both industry and the user public. Stennis Space Center manages EOCAP for all of NASA."

Summit's mission is to provide practical, technically sound environmental assessments, management and solutions. The company came to NASA to see how they could successfully implement remote sensing technology into their service and to learn ways in which remote sensing could be utilized in other ways to help support its clients.

Through co-funding with EOCAP, Summit is in the process of developing an approach that would define a ground water flow model for a study area, or rather would survey the area's conditions, depict its boundaries, indicate changes in the activity, etc. Then, using in-field sensors and space-based communications, REALFLOW™ would transmit the data to a central location for computer processing and development of two- or three-dimensional models. This allows user temporal views of current water conditions using Geographic Information System as a management tool.

Summit has been testing REALFLOW™ at a site in the Twin Cities where a local gas station has contaminated the ground water. The company anticipates using high resolution aerial photography to create three-dimensional views over the study area. This data will then be transformed into a map to be used to back-drop the water table information.

The image map displays indicators of surface effects resulting from the clean-up efforts. It also shows the location of housing, schools, public buildings and other places relative to the study area.

While working with NASA, Summit wanted to see if Stennis Space Center's expertise in remote sensing could also benefit them in other projects. Currently, they are working with SSC's Commercial Remote Sensing Program Office on a parallel project in Chatam County, N.C.

An international company with diversified product offerings contracted Summit to compile an environmental impact statement of an area of the county where a large land holder wants to mine for bedrock. In order for the company to acquire mining permits, it has to determine what areas can and cannot be mined as well as the effects of that mining.

Using remote sensing, Summit identified the geographic impact of mining for bedrock in that area. In some areas, bedrock may act as a support for geographic and ecological infrastructures. Other areas may serve as habitats for endangered species of plants or animals and may require intermediate action prior to excavation.

Mapping an area using remote sensing indicates the best location for a mine based on the bedrock and water site proximity by detailing the soil and rock types and mapping the streams and water bodies in the area. Nicholas Schmidt, a Lockheed employee at SSC, said, "This technique also allows Summit or other users to pinpoint where significant amounts of bedrock are found in shallow areas as opposed to random drilling."

The company now wants to apply Summit's remote sensing applications to other projects, such as land-use assessment and geographic analysis. This same technology may allow Summit to serve many of their other clients by providing more detailed environmental impact statements, providing recommendations and helping clients acquire permits.

For more information on NASA's EOCAP, contact Mick at (601) 688-1814.

National Trial Competition Awards

Summer art program for youths at Pass Christian Library

The Pass Christian Art Association, in conjunction with the Pass Christian Library, will hold a seven-week art program this summer for children ages 11-15 at the library.

Theme for the summer program is "Art For Youth's Sake." A member of the art association will work in an area of expertise each week with youths attending.

According to Joseph Pearson, a Pass Christian artist who developed the pilot program, the workshops will have a positive effect on those participating.

"It (the program) will be a positive activity for these youngsters," Pearson said. "It will give them exposure to the arts they may not receive elsewhere." Art Association president Joida Evans, a former public and private school art teacher, agrees with Pearson's evaluation.

"It's a positive building block for them to move forward with," she said. "One sweet taste of success will help them reach the next step."

Some of the subject areas in which association members will teach are cartooning, figure and face drawing, watercolors and painting.

The program officially begins Thursday, June 22.

Symposium looks at World War II

The 50th anniversary of Allied victory in World War II this year has provided a University of Southern Mississippi history professor with a fortunate meeting of research and the calendar.

USM historian Dr. Neil McMillen, the 1993 recipient of the Charles Wickliffe Moorman Alumni Distinguished Professorship in the Humanities, has organized a three-day symposium Oct. 5-7 to look at the impact of World War II on the American South. The symposium, "World War II and the American South: The War That Drove Old Dixie Down?" is presented as part of the two-year Moorman professorship.

The professorship provides a USM faculty member an opportunity to pursue specific research. It was created to aid in strengthening, recruiting and retaining quality faculty at USM.

McMillen won the Bancroft Prize in American History in 1990 for his book Dark Journey: Black Mississippians in the Age of Jim Crow. Taking the next step — moving into the World War II years — is a natural progression of that research and will eventually provide a sequel to Dark Journey, McMillen said.

"For a century or more, conventional wisdom has argued that the one great turning point in the (Southern) region's history was the Civil War," McMillen said.

len said. "... In recent years, scholars have challenged this convention... Was the Second World War a major turning point in Southern history and life? Did it drive old Dixie down? ... These are the central questions of this symposium."

The October symposium is designed to "address a cluster of related problems of enduring fascination" concerning the South and the war, McMillen said. Sessions feature noted scholars and World War II veterans discussing issues, including:

- The Mind of the Modern South.
- The Transformation of Southern Higher Education.
- The South, Congressional Politics and National Interest.
- Southern Women in a World At War.

The symposium is funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities and the Hardin Foundation. The opening session is at 7 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 5, followed by a full day of sessions Friday, Oct. 6, and three sessions Saturday, Oct. 7.

The symposium is free to all and participants may attend all sessions or specific sessions.

Pre-registration is requested to ensure adequate seating. To pre-register or for more information, contact USM Continuing Education, Box 5136, Hattiesburg, Miss. 39406-5136, (601) 266-4186.

Ambulance member benefits

Being a member of American Medical Response (formerly Mobile Medic Ambulance and AMSERV) recently became an even bigger health care bargain. Regional chief executive officer John Rester has announced a major expansion in the area in which membership is valid, at no extra charge.

Effective immediately, AMR membership is valid in 11 Mississippi counties (including Hancock County), and 35 Louisiana parishes. 34,000 households in Mississippi and Louisiana belong to membership programs under AMR Mid-South, based in Gulfport. Membership eliminates out-of-pocket expenses for medical necessary, covered ambulance service, which includes all emergencies such as heart attacks and serious injuries.

Members receive a substantial discount off AMR's regular fees for non-emergency ambulance service. An annual fee of $42 covers all permanent residents of a household, no matter how many times ambulance service is needed. The average cost of care and transport by AMR is about $380.

Most of the expansion resulted from an agreement between AMR and Louisiana's Acadian Ambulance to recognize each other's membership programs. Louisiana's largest independent ambulance service, Acadian covers 23 parishes, including Baton Rouge and Lafayette.

AMR covers 12 parishes and seven Mississippi counties. AMR-Mississippi covers the three Gulf Coast counties and Madison and Hinds counties (including Jackson). Through a long-standing arrangement with Hattiesburg-based AAA Ambulance, AMR membership is also good in Stone, Forrest, Pearl River and Lamar counties.

"Many of our members travel frequently through Louisiana, so this expansion is a tremendous increase in the value of membership," Rester said.

AMR's campaign for 1995-96 membership kicked off June 15 and will end July 31.

AMR is the largest provider of emergency and non-emergency ambulance service in Mississippi and is the state's only nationally-accredited ambulance service.

For information about membership, contact AMR's campaign coordinator, Claire Weems at (601) 897-1194 in Gulfport. Phone lines are open Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 6:30 p.m.

Magnani attended Coast Episcopal High School in Pass Christian. She received many academic awards while at Coast, including being named a Mississippi Governor's Scholar for 1985 and the 1986 Star Student. She was Coast's 1985 homecoming queen and valedictorian of the 1986 graduating class.

Magnani attended the University of New Mexico on an academic scholarship. She was a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority and received the Scholarship Key for the highest grade point average in the sorority.

She received the Dean of Students Award for academic excellence, and was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Phi Kappa Phi honor fraternities. In 1990, Magnani was graduated summa cum laude with a bachelor of science in biology and entered the UNM School of Medicine.

Dispute

the awarding of points for honors classes and the "leveling" of those classes.

Currently, Bay High's curriculum is divided into three levels. Levels I and II are honors and Advanced Placement courses and are thus awarded weighted averages. Level III classes are the core classes and students receive no weighted points for those.

The problem arose last fall when the school did not offer Spanish III and Spanish IV, but did offer French III and French IV. Those classes are all Level I classes and receive the highest weights.

Some parents felt it unfair because students taking French III and French IV would gain an unfair points advantage in the race for valedictorian and salutatorian.

Additionally, there was some question as to how much weight to assign honors classes. Board member Richard Flowers had proposed weighting Level II classes an extra 25 percent and Level I classes an additional 50 percent on the quality point scale.

A corresponding value would be assigned in the numeric system.

In the quality point system, points are assigned for corresponding grades, such as four points for an "A," three for a "B," etc.

In the numeric system, class rankings are determined by students' final numeric grade in each class.

Flowers' plan was also met with opposition.

So after a two-day break, the board reconvened and adopted a two-tenet compromise.

The first was that Level I classes not offered at Bay High could be taken through a correspondence course at USM or Mississippi State. The student would receive the full weight of a Level I class under the resolution, which was proposed by Flowers.

Additionally, the board adopted a 10/20 scale, where 10 percent would be added for Level II classes and 20 percent for Level I classes.

The board also threw in the caveat that a student must earn at least a C or better for an honors class to be weighted.

A statistician was called in to develop a corresponding scale to equate quality points to numeric values because Flowers said "we need a conversion factor."

Flowers followed with a motion that would have ratified the board's earlier agreement regarding incoming freshman. Besides being on a straight quality point system, the agreement also called for only one level of honors classes, which Penrose originally initiated.

However, Penrose took exception to the quality point system, saying "the valedictorian and salutatorian must be based on a numeric system. It's a fine line."

After a lengthy discussion, the board voted that class rank will be "based on a weighted numeric average based on quality points calculated on seven semesters."

Also, the honor roll, according to the board's resolution, "will be based on weighted grade point averages based on numeric averages."

Only one level of honors classes was kept in place for incoming freshman.

The board also voted to accept the low bid of Browning Brothers Flooring for a new gym floor at Bay High for a cost of $81,000.

Coast Guard nationwide competition

The United States Coast Guard Academy is now accepting and processing applications for appointment to U.S. Coast Guard Academy, Class of 2000.

Candidates must arrange to participate in either the SAT I or ACT prior to or including the December 1995 test administrations.

Appointments are based on the candidate's high school record, performance on either the SAT I or ACT, and leadership potential as demonstrated by participation in high school activities, community service and part-time employment. Most successful candidates rank in the top quarter of their high school class and have demonstrated proficiency in both mathematical and applied science.

...between the Diamondhead residential community and the casino complex. The area will be used, possibly, as an ecological study site.

The complex would be the first gaming facility directly accessible from Interstate 10 — but Reddien says competing neighbors would be welcome.

Casino World's site stretches some two miles wide, between the Diamondhead Yacht Club and the Harrison County line. It would be accessible from Exit 16 of Interstate 10, with a new, elevated access road leading to the development.

Reddien said he's been working with state and federal highways to develop the possibility of constructing an additional exit off Interstate 10 east of the existing Diamondhead exit.

That possibility, he said, would make even more sense if plans for the Pine Hills casino development in the same area are revised and revived. Earlier this year, the Supreme Court nixed that development's plans — because it featured a man-made 1,200-foot canal to accommodate the casinos.

Reddien said while he's had no talks with Pine Hills officials, obviously they are watching Casino World's progress closely.

Even if Pine Hills never develops a casino on the Bay, Reddien said he's planning to develop a relationship with Bay St. Louis' Casino Magic — another "destination resort" type development on the Bay.

Reddien said multiple casinos in the Bay could work together to solidify the Bay area as a major casino center. Boats could ferry passengers from one to another, he said, for instance, giving patrons different, easy options.

Reddien sees Casino World drawing 80 percent of its business from the west — he says the location is far superior than downtown New Orleans, and will be particularly enticing to Slidell area residents.

Stennis International Airport, he said, is a remarkable resource for area casinos, he added, and no doubt will be utilized as a junket landing spot for Casino World patrons.

Aside from having site approval from the state, Casino World has service arrangements with the Diamondhead water and sewer district — another key step in the development process.

Crucial approval by environmental agencies, he said, is not assured, but appears to be possible. Every agency with permitting authority over the project has reviewed the site preliminarily, he said.

There appear to be no major "heartache" issues standing in the way, he added, although the approval process itself could take a year.

One the money side, Reddien said developers are working with "major players" to finance the project, although no announcements are ready on the details.

Reddien did note, however, that the financial impact to Hancock County government would be substantial — shared revenues would pump big money into county schools, law enforcement, fire districts and general county government, he said.

That's in addition to the employment of some 1,300 workers and the taxes they'd be paying locally, Reddien added.

Reddien is chairman and chief executive officer of Casino World Inc. An attorney licensed in Colorado and California, Reddien said his background primarily is in investment banking.

Board

rently agreed, because the members unanimously approved Peterson's motion to award the base bid contract of $549,600, with no alternates, to Samuel B. Day Construction.

A second alternate, which dealt with installation of walkway covers in an area that is currently exposed to the weather, was not mentioned.

PERFORMANCE CONTRACTING

The board unanimously approved a motion to enter negotiations for a contract with Terry Gaudet and Associates for engineering services for performance contracting with Landis & Gyr.

A question arose during discussion as to whether or not the board would be held responsible for paying Gaudet and Associates some amount of money at this point in the proceedings. Board president Cheryl Bennett pointed out that the motion authorized the board only to enter negotiations for a contract, not to enter into a contract yet.

She said the board needed to approve this motion so that board attorney Steve Benvenutti could negotiate with Gaudet and Associates to find out just what the "engineering services" offered would entail.

Camille Steen of Landis & Gyr addressed the board members at their June 5 meeting about performance contracting for utility usage.

She explained that performance contracting is a self-funding program that first helps the district improve its energy efficiency, thereby saving money, then takes some of those savings and uses them to pay for the equipment that created the improved efficiency.

She had reported in an earlier meeting with the board that her company's initial survey of the school district's buildings — the schools and the administrative offices — projected a $60,000 savings each year in energy costs if the district chose to become involved in a performance contract.

She reminded the board that her company must guarantee the savings stated in the contract for the full length of the contract, which she said typically runs from eight to 10 years.

Steen told the board members at their June 5 meeting that they needed to decide whether or not to go forward with a request for proposal. That would authorize an independent engineer, which the state requires school boards to retain for such projects, to be hired to make an in-depth survey of the school district's needs and present the project parameters that will best fulfill those needs.

Steen pointed out that the consulting fee can be included in the project cost if the board decides to enter a performance contract, but if the board decides not to do so, the consulting fee could cost the board up to $3,750.

This $3,750 fee was what concerned the board, but once Bennett pointed out that the board was not authorizing that a contract be signed yet, and therefore no money was to be spent at this point, the board members had no qualms about entering into negotiations with Gaudet and Associates.

BUDGET

The school board also held its public hearing for the proposed 1995-96 school budget. The district is proposing a total budget of $18,151,918.23 for the 1995-96 school year.

This budget, which represents an increase of $649,158.16 over last year's budget, will not increase the millage rate for county residents. A projected increase in ad valorem tax revenues is expected to bring in extra monies.

Superintendent Myrna Bourgeois gave an overview of the budget for those attending the meeting (there were seven people present other than the superintendent, board, assistant superintendent Eddie Danzey, board secretary and financial officer).

After explaining the budget, Bourgeois asked for input from the public. Terrell Randolph asked some questions regarding millage, and board member Lennette Nécise also asked a few questions about fund transfers.

There was no other input from the public.

The board will approve the budget at a later date; the district has until July 15 to approve the budget and set the millage for the district.

After approving the consent agenda, which contained 32 items, the board recessed until Monday, June 26, at 2 p.m. The only item on that meeting's agenda deals with personnel.

The board's next regular meeting will be Wednesday, July 5, at 4:30 p.m. in the board room at the Hancock School District office, Hwy. 90 in Waveland.

FISHIN' Y'ALL

By Jim Maness

It's time to go fishin' y'all. There will be no changes to the creel limits or the size limits on speckled trout until some time around the end of August.

That's right, fishin' buddies, DMR decided they better follow the law and not enact an ordinance until at least 30 days after they held a public hearing on the ordinance.

For those who did not know about the one public hearing held in Biloxi, you do not have another chance. Ya see, there is no schedule to have hearings in any other Coast county. Only one hearing was conducted in Harrison County, and it was supposed to suffice for Jackson County and Hancock County.

The monthly meeting of the Commission on Marine Resources was held this past Tuesday at their new offices at 152 Gateway Drive in Biloxi. At this meeting changes in several ordinances were to be voted on by the Commission.

The changes were to include closing some of the barrier islands to recreational shrimping, opening some of the barrier island spawning grounds to year-round commercial fishing, and the reduction of the speckled trout creel limit from 25 fish per day to 10 fish per day. There was also to be a provision to eliminate the provision for five undersized trout from the creel limit.

The five undersize trout provision only applied to trout between 12 inches and 14 inches. The undersize provision was instituted in 1991 when BMR raised the size limit from 12 inches to 14 inches on all speckled trout. More than 1,600 Coast residents signed petitions requesting that at least some 12-inch trout be allowed to be kept because that seemed to be the only size that was caught by wade and seawall fishermen.

Additionally, it was felt that the undersize provision allowed fish that were hooked in a manner that they would not survive if released to be kept by the fishermen.

Commissioner Doug Horn, who represents the commercial seafood processing industry, was the one who introduced the proposed ordinance to open some of the barrier island spawning grounds to year-round commercial fishing. He withdrew the ordinance at this Commission meeting.

Even though there was to be no action on the proposed ordinance, the staff of DMR reported there were 48 people in attendance at the public hearing. Additionally DMR received 73 written comments on the proposed ordinances.

The Commission on Marine Resources meeting started with a request for public comments. Two local fishing camp owners, Toxie Hall of LaFrance Fish Camp and Tommy Bordage of Brodage's Fish Camp requested they be allowed to catch bait shrimp at night.

Pete Ungenstock states that since Louisiana, Texas, Alabama and Florida have restrictions on gill nets, there could be as many as 6,000 gill netters coming into Mississippi waters, so the Commission should enact an immediate total moratorium on the issuance of all new commercial fin fish licenses.

Of major interest to the economy of our area, Sea Pride Industries received permission to start their oyster depuration (purifying) business. This new industry is on the cutting edge of technology. It is unfortunate it has taken over a year to surmount what can only be called the "siege mentality obstructionism" of some of the DMR staff.

Some folks may recall the same company tried for three years to introduce new saltwater fish farming concepts to Mississippi, only to be finally thwarted by the same siege mentality of the same people of the then BMR. Sea Pride has since opened its fish farms in Alabama and is producing tens of thousands of pounds of fish per year in Alabama.

The Hancock County Board of Supervisors received a one-year extension on the beach replenishment permit.

The U.S. Corps of Engineers received approval to dredge the channel at the mouth of Bayou Caddy.

There will be public hearings on the proposed Boat and Water Safety Ordinance starting July 24. This new ordinance will control the operation of such watercraft as jet skis.

One final point of interest. A survey found there are 165 sunken and derelict vessels in the waters of Harrison and Hancock County.

On the fishing scene, trout, reds and flounders were caught in the surf this past week, mostly on live shrimp. However some folks had a degree of success using silver spoons and clear sparkle beetles.

The water has finally cleared up out by Half Moon Island and should be producing fish "right now."

This week's wonderful wise words: It's time to go fishin' y'all.

Has the change from BMR to DMR changed anything at all, Turtle?

Conservation tillage conference focuses on water quality

Crop producers, scientists and agribusinessmen can explore conservation farming systems and improving water quality at a June 26 conference. The Southern Conservation Tillage Conference for Sustainable Agriculture is expected to draw more than 200 participants from 13 southern states to Jackson's Ramada Coliseum.

The conference, established in 1978, seeks to improve crop production, reduce production costs, control soil erosion and maintain sustainable agriculture. Under the theme "Conservation Farming: A Focus on Water Quality," the latest research in tillage and animal waste as fertilizer will be discussed.

"Today's farm managers face tremendous challenges," said Dr. Normie Buehring, Missis-sipi Agricultural and Forestry Experiment Station agronomist. "They must conserve farm resources yet remain productive and competitive."

Concurrent tours in Hinds and Rankin counties will feature farms using conservation tillage, and commercial and research operations using animal waste as fertilizer.

Conservation tillage systems for cotton, corn and early-maturing soybeans will be studied on the Rankin County farms of Bernard King, George Wiley III, and Tony Chaffin.

The second group will inspect Cal Maine's 1,400-head dairy operation which recycles animal waste through no-till corn-silage and bermudagrass hay. Tour participants also will examine the Brown Loam branch experiment station's conservation tillage and poultry litter research.

Farm equipment manufacturers will demonstrate their products at four stops.

At the conference headquarters, poster sessions, commercial exhibits and presentations will focus on the impact of tillage and animal waste on water quality, and on crop response to tillage systems and fertilizer management.

Certified Crop advisors will receive continuing education unit credits for maintaining their credentials by taking part in the conference.

For information about participating in the Conservation Tillage Conference for Sustainable Agriculture, contact Dr. Normie Buehring, P. O. Box 456, Verona, MS 38879, or call (601) 563-2201.

Catfish processing, sales strong in '95

As Mississippi catfish producers head into their busiest time of the year, processing and prices are up, while fish supplies remain tight.

Both catfish processing and sales have been strong for the first quarter of 1995.

"Catfish processing is up 6.4 percent — an increase of 9.4 million pounds from the first quarter of 1994," said Bill Allen, president of the Catfish Institute in Belzoni.

Allen said fish supplies have been right through this spring, which is normal for this time of year.

Catfish supplies have been relatively tight since '94, leading to a price boost for growers. Prices have climbed steadily upward after hitting a low point for the industry in 1992.

Dr. Marty Brunson, extension leader of wildlife and fisheries at Mississippi State University, said the scarcity of harvested food-size fish is keeping prices to growers high.

Average prices are about 79 cents per pound for food-size fish," Brunson said. "The big question is how many food-size fish are in ponds now. Supply and demand of food-size fish available for processing will determine the future of catfish prices over the next few months."

The new crop of food-size fish will be ready for harvest during mid-July and August. Catfish are harvested year-round in Mississippi's 100,000 acres of catfish ponds.

Fingerling production for 1995 also is a concern for the industry. Cool, wet temperatures through April and May delayed catfish spawning activity.

"Catfish really need the water temperature to be between 78 and 82 degrees for spawning. June's warm temperatures should help them catch up," Brunson said.

June's warm temperatures also mean the beginning of pond oxygen level and water quality concerns for growers.

"As the water temperatures rise, keeping adequate oxygen in ponds becomes a challenge that lasts until September," Brunson said. "This is a time of intense management for farmers — a time to watch water quality and a time for heavy feeding."

Catfish demand will get an extra boost during summer's harvest season as The Catfish Institute kicks off a $2 million national advertising campaign.

The advertisements will appear in consumer magazines and on cable television stations, and are expected to reach consumers all over the United States, with 285 million total advertisement impressions.

"In a further push to boost catfish demand, we're sponsoring a mid-June seminar in Hamburg, Germany to target German seafood buyers," Allen said. "So far they have shown great interest in catfish products."

The Catfish Institute is a non-profit corporation funded by $5 per ton contributions from catfish feed mills in Mississippi, Louisiana, Alabama and Arkansas.

Alcohol:

Boating's Number 1 killer on the 4th of July

More people will die in alcohol-related boating accidents this Fourth of July than on any other day of the year, according to 500,000-member BOAT/US (Boat Owners Association of the United States), the nation's largest organization of recreational boaters.

death on the nation's waterways on the 4th, and alcohol will be a factor in almost half. "Drinking and boating is a serious safety issue any day of the week, but it's far worse on July 4 because it's a traditionally festive occasion," said BOAT/US President Richard Schwartz.

to appoint a qualified "designated skipper" who will take a holiday from consuming alcohol and to keep a watchful eye on their passengers.

"A guest on your boat who has had too much to drink could easily fall overboard and drown," he said.

Boating while intoxicated (BWI) is not only dangerous — it's illegal. The U.S. Coast Guard enforces federal law, which sets a blood alcohol concentration (BAC) standard of .10 percent as legal intoxication. A boat operator with a BAC above .10 is ten times more likely to be killed in a boating accident than a boater with zero BAC.

Violators face a civil penalty of up to $1,000 or a criminal fine up to $5,000 and a year in jail. Forty-six states also have BWI laws which are enforced by the marine police as well as state and local police departments. In three of these states — Alaska, Massachusetts and New Jersey — a boater convicted of BWI can also lose his or her driver's license. There are no BAC standards in Iowa, Kentucky, New Mexico, Oklahoma and the District of Columbia.

BUI law starts July 1

Effective July 1, Mississippi will have a Boating Under the Influence (BUI) law. The law was passed by the 1995 legislature and signed by the governor.

"This law should serve as a deterrent to those people who drink and drive a boat," said Dr. Sam Polles, Mississippi Department of Wildlife, Fisheries and Parks executive director.

"I commend the legislature and the governor on taking the necessary steps to alleviate what has become a very serious problem not just in Mississippi but across the nation."

The BUI law, which will be enforced on all marine waters in the state and all public lakes, will apply to watercraft with a 25 or more horsepower motor, and the boat must be in operation and moving. There is also a provision that pertains to jet skis and similar craft.

First-time offenders can be fined up to $1,000 and face imprisonment. The violator will also have to complete a boating education course.

Hunter workshop

A Hunter Education Instructor Workshop was recently held at the Gulfport Police Pistol Range. Among those attending (L-R): Bobby Dardar, assistant instructor for the Hancock County Hunter Education Teaching Team; Scott Gordon, District Six Supervisor for the Wildlife, Fisheries and Parks; and Tom Williams and Bill Kimbrell, assistant instructors for the Hancock County teaching team.

Rozelle finalists named

BY JOSEPH W. GEX II
The Touchdown Club of New Orleans has selected four finalists for the organization's 7th annual Pete Rozelle award.

The finalists for the award are Tom Landry, former head coach of the Dallas Cowboys; Marv Levy, the current head coach of the Buffalo Bills; Tex Schramm, the former president of the Dallas Cowboys; and Don Shula, the current head coach of the Miami Dolphins.

The finalists were chosen from a group of strong candidates across the nation.

The club started the award in 1989 when the then Commissioner of the National Football League, Pete Rozelle, was retiring.

Some of the biggest names in football have received the award including Jim Finks, the late general manager of the New Orleans Saints.

The presentation will be made on August 24 at the Hyatt Regency during the "Welcome the Saints" luncheon.

Allen wins Pro Stock feature at Sun Coast

Heat winner Wallace Allen posted his first feature win of the season by holding off Jamie Luzenberg in a wheel-to-wheel duel. At the start of the race it was Timmy Moody and Donald Parker on the front row as the green flag dropped on the 16-car field.

Parker took his new ride to the front of the pack, but a caution called for a single file restart. Parker did not agree with the lineup, which put him behind Moody on the restart.

Parker's car got out of shape as he tried to get by Moody and dropped back to fourth. Moody gave the lead over to Allen in the early part of the race after several cautions had been brought out. Parker was charged with a caution, sending him to the rear of the pack.

As Parker worked his way back toward the front, another caution flew for another car, which Parker might have thought he was going to be charged with, and took his car into the pit area.

With all the happenings going on around him it was still a pleasing win for Allen and his Arts Automotive-powered No. 1 to break into the feature win column.

Larry Cifra made a strong showing as he worked his way into the third spot after starting several rows back. Jeremy Broadus won the second heat race.

In the 4-cylinder modified division Marius Jacobs went flag-to-flag for the win. Jimmy Necaise worked his way into the second spot, but was unable to take the lead from Jacob.

Jerry Farve started alongside Jacob, but would have to settle for the third spot. Jamie Farve won the earlier heat race.

Chuckie Smith and B. J. Anderson lead the 20-car lineup to the green flag. Anderson held the early lead before Smith managed to pass, taking over the lead for the remainder of the race.

Doug Bilbo worked his way from back in the pack to the third spot. Lonnie Scarbrough was also moving toward the front when he got collected up by another car.

Anderson held on for a second place finish over Bilbo for his best finish of the season. Heat wins went to Scarbrough, Jerry Winstead and Cliff Darby.

Johnny Willis went flag-to-flag for the B Maine Street stock feature win. Cliff Darby worked his way from midway in the 18-car field to a second place finish over Punkin Taylor, last week's winner.

K. I. Davis and heat winner Billy Joe Schonewitz started on the front row in the late model sportsman feature. As the green flag fell, Schonewitz moved to the front where he managed to hold off Davis for several early laps.

Davis tried unsuccessfully to pass on the low side, but was finally able to get by Schonewitz on the high side coming out of turn two.

Ben Davis picked up the third spot as he chased both to the checkers.

In the Rookie Division, B. J. Barnes claimed his first feature win of the season as he managed to get by heat winner David Scott. Cynthia Thompson finished third rounding out the top three.

Next week's program will feature 4cy modifieds ladies race and bike races for the kids.

Sports Museum offers public a piece of history

BY JOSEPH W. GEX II

Would you like to be immortalized in the walkway leading up to the new Mississippi Sport Hall of Fame? Well, now you can.

For $50, you can help line the way to the Sports Hall of Fame now under construction in Jackson.

The building measures over 21,000 square feet and will open in the spring of 1996.

Foundation representatives are planning to sell about 4000 bricks to raise additional funds for the museum. Executive Director Michael Rubenstein commented that sales are up and plan to meet their goal.

He states, "We've had people buy bricks for themselves, former coach, children, or loved ones." Rubenstein continued, "People seem to enjoy the idea that they are able to buy something that makes them or a loved one a permanent part of Mississippi's sports history."

The bricks have two lines available for inscription with up to 14 letters on each line. If there are bricks ordered together, they will be placed as close together as possible.

The bricks are tax deductible up to the extent that the law will allow.

For more information please, contact the Mississippi Sports Foundation, Inc., P.O. Box 16021, Jackson, Mississippi 39236-6021 or you can call 1-800-280-FAME or 601-982-8264.
